

Dr Shanthi Mendis coordinates the global program for Prevention and Management of noncommunicable diseases at the World Health Organization, Geneva, Switzerland. She has been the Senior Adviser/coordinator of the World Health Organization cardiovascular and noncommunicable diseases programs from 2000. She served as Professor of Medicine, at the Faculty of Medicine, Peradeniya Sri Lanka from 1979 for twenty years. She is a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians and a Fellow of the American College of Cardiology. She received post-doctoral training in the United Kingdom and USA. She has wide experience in Global Health, Internal Medicine, Cardiology, Policy development and Research in developing countries and has published widely.